- For undergraduate students with outstanding academic records (in the top 10% of the class), or a GPA above 3.9: no more than 31 credit hours per semester.
- For undergraduate students who minor or read in the Teacher Education Program: no more than 31 credit hours per semester.
- For double-major undergraduate students: no more than 33 credit hours per semester.
- Undergraduate students who can't complete their Bachelor's degree in 4 years should observe the max. credit requirements set for their seniors; for those students with no min. credit requirement, they should at least take one course.
- Elite athlete students or students with disabilities shall select at least one course of any credit.
- Students who have filled out Credit Overload Authorization form and received approval from mentors, department chairs & the Dean of Academic Affairs can increase their course load.
- Students who have filled out Credit Reduction Authorization form and received approval from mentors and department chairs can reduce their course load.
- Credit requirements for graduate students do not apply to their theses or dissertations.
- For those students with no min. credit requirement, undergraduate students should take at least one non-credit course, and graduate students can simply register for thesis writing.
- Undergraduate students will be disqualified from the Presidential Award if
 - they take less than 15 credits each semester in their previous 3 years of study in a 4-year program;
 - they take less than 9 credits each semester in their final year of study in a 4-year program;
 - they take less than 15 credits each semester in their previous 4 years of study in a 5-year program;
 - they take less than 9 credits each semester in their final year of study in a 5-year program.

The same rules also apply to a 6- or 7-year undergraduate program.
