You must wait until the Course Selection System opens and complete registration in the system for it to

Course Registration	Q. How many courses or class sections may I register under “Other Courses”?	A: You may register for up to 99 courses. If the same course number has different class sections, each section is counted as one course.
Course Registration	Q. May I register for multiple sections of the same course number?	A: Yes. However, after course allocation, at most one section of the same course number will be allocated to you.
Course Registration	Q. Why can’t I find the course I want to register for?	A: Please register for it under “Other Courses.” [Note] In the fall semester, all courses other than Chinese, English/Foreign Languages, Calculus B, and Calculus 1–4 are listed under “Other Courses.” For “Online English for Graduate Students,” please add the course through the link provided on the homepage of the Course Selection System.

Course Registration & Allocation	Q. After I register for a course in the Course Selection System, does that mean I have successfully enrolled in the course?	A: No. [Note] The Course Pre-Registration Stage 1 follows a “register first, allocate later” process. All registered courses will be allocated together after the registration period ends. Please check the “Enrollment Results Query” system to confirm whether you have successfully enrolled in a course.
Chinese / English & Foreign Languages / Calculus	Q. Why must I register for multiple class sections for Chinese, English/Foreign Languages, and Calculus preference courses?	A: To prevent students from registering for only a few popular sections and then failing to be allocated any course, which may affect their course planning, the system requires students to register for a minimum number of class sections before submitting their preferences.

Chinese / English & Foreign Languages / Calculus	Q. When I enter the serial number of a “Japanese (Ⅰ) (1) ” section under “English/Foreign Languages,” the system says the serial number is not for an English/Foreign Languages course. What should I do?	A: Please register for the course under “Other Courses.” [Note] Under “English/Foreign Languages,” in addition to “Freshman English,” only “Japanese (1)/(2)” is counted as a foreign language course. If you wish to have foreign language courses offered by the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, the Department of Japanese Language and Literature, or the Foreign Language Teaching and Resource Center counted toward your foreign language area credits, please go to the NTU Course Website(NOL) → “General” → “Foreign Languages” and carefully read the course selection notes.
Chinese / English & Foreign Languages / Calculus	Q. Why can’t I register for “Japanese (1)” under “English/Foreign Languages”?	A: Possible reasons are as follows: 1. Some departments allow students to fulfill the foreign language area requirement only with English courses. Students in those departments cannot register for “Japanese (1).” Please check your department’s regulations via myNTU → “NTU Required Courses Inquiry.” 2. “Japanese (1)” is a freshman foreign language area course and is limited to first-year students during the Course Pre-Registration Stage 1. Non-first-year students who wish to take the course should obtain a permission number from the instructor after the semester begins, or consider taking “Japanese I (1)” instead.
Pre-assigned Required Courses	Q. Can first-year students switch to another section of the pre-assigned “Freshman English” course?	A: Yes. [Note] According to NTU’s “Freshman English Placement and Advising Guidelines for Regular Students,” students may drop the pre-assigned “Freshman English” course and register another English section or another foreign language area course instead.
Pre-assigned Required Courses	Q. Can pre-assigned required courses be dropped?	A: Yes, but please consider carefully before doing so. [Note] Pre-assigned required courses are courses marked as “Required and Pre-assigned” in the “Required/Elective” column on the NTU Course Website. These are usually courses required by the department for that year level, or spring-semester courses automatically carried over from a year-long course taken in the fall semester. If you drop such a course but still need to take it, you must obtain the course again through the registration and allocation process.
Preference Order & Allocation	Q. What is the purpose of entering a preference order when registering for courses?	A: The system will refer to your preference order in the following situations: 1.Courses with time conflicts. 2.Multiple sections with the same course number. 3.When the allocated credits have reached your credit limit. During allocation, the system will prioritize courses with higher preference rankings and cancel those with lower preference rankings.

Preference Order & Allocation	Q. Will the preference order I enter affect my allocation priority compared with other students?	A: No. [Note] The preference order is used only to determine the allocation order among the courses you have registered for. It does not affect your allocation priority compared with other students.
Allocation Order	Q. If I register for Chinese, English/Foreign Languages, Calculus, and Other Courses at the same time, what is the	A: The allocation order for this stage is as follows: pre-assigned required courses → Chinese → English/Foreign Languages → Calculus → Other Courses.
Allocation Order	Q. What is the allocation priority for students pursuing a double major or minor?	A: For courses taken toward a double major or minor, the allocation priority is as follows : students of the offering department and double-major students → minor students → students with disabilities → other students.
Credit Limit & Course Allocation	Q. Is the credit limit adjusted during the Course Pre-Registration Stage 1or 2 ?	A: The automatic increase in the maximum course load takes effect beginning in The Course Pre-Registration Stage 2. For regulations governing minimum and maximum course loads, please refer to the announcement in the "Course Selection" section.
Credit Limit & Course Allocation	Q. What happens if the total number of credits I register for exceeds the maximum course load?	A: Higher-priority courses are allocated first. Once you reach the maximum credit limit, lower-priority courses will not be allocated.
Allocation Order	Q. I ranked some courses offered by NTNU or NTUST. After the allocation results were released, I was allocated the courses ranked 22 and 66, but not the course ranked 10. Why?	A: Preference No. 10 was not allocated because an NTU course had already been allocated in the same time slot. [Note] NTU courses are allocated before non-NTU courses.
Allocation Order	Q. May I register for courses with time conflicts? During allocation, will all conflicting courses be deleted?	A: You may register for conflicting courses during pre-registration, as registration does not guarantee enrollment. During allocation, courses conflicting with pre-assigned required courses or allocated Chinese, English/Foreign Languages, or Calculus courses will not be allocated. For conflicts between “Other Courses,” the course with the higher preference ranking will be kept.
Course Drop and Reinstatement	Q. If I accidentally drop a course that I did not intend to drop, can it be reinstated?	A: Once you drop a course, the course record is deleted. If you wish to take the course again, you must add the course again according to the course add procedure. Please consider carefully before dropping a course.
